Manager Commentary
Peter Hewitt

Almost all major global equity markets suffered declines during the month. The S&P Composite Index experienced one of the most pronounced falls, down over 6% in dollar terms. To put this into perspective, it remains one of the better-performing markets in the calendar year to date, with a gain of over 10% in dollar terms. Increased trade tensions between China and the US, combined with evidence of slower levels of growth across many regions, were behind investors becoming cautious about growth prospects. This was highlighted in bond markets, where yields fell back to low levels, and in markets' anticipation that the next move in US interest rates could be downwards. In the UK, the endless political uncertainty caused by Brexit appeared to be behind the resignation of the prime minister. Most of the likely replacements were viewed as being sympathetic towards a harder or 'no deal' Brexit. This was reflected in currency markets, where sterling weakened around 3% against both the dollar and the euro.

Against this background, the FTSE All Share Index fell by 3.0%, while the FTSE Equity Investment Instruments Index was down by 2.6% (both in total return terms). The best performer in the Income portfolio was Assura, the specialist medical property group that owns a portfolio of GP surgeries and small medical centres across the UK. Its full-year results were better than expected and the dividend was increased by 5%. The shares rose 8%.

Key risks

Stock market movements may cause the value of investments and the income from them to fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Changes in rates of exchange may have an adverse effect on the value, price or income of investments. If markets fall, gearing can magnify the negative impact on performance.
