April 2019

Manager Commentary
Peter Hewitt

Almost all major equity markets across the globe continued to experience recovery from the lows at the end of 2018. The US equity market has resumed leadership, with further gains in March, to record a near 14% rise over the quarter (sterling adjusted total returns). More indications from the US Federal Reserve that interest rates were unlikely to rise at all in 2019 – and may have peaked for this cycle – encouraged markets higher. There are concerns over the growth path for the rest of this year, which was reflected in bond yields retreating in both the US and Europe, such that the yield curve in the US was close to inverting. This is viewed by investors as a strong indicator of recession next year. The UK participated in the general recovery in equity markets, despite acute uncertainty regarding Brexit. The value of sterling, which is a good leading indicator of what different types of Brexit may mean for the UK, has remained remarkably stable over recent months.

Against this backdrop, the FTSE All Share Index rose 2.7%, while the FTSE Equity Investment Instruments Index was ahead by 1.5% (both figures are total return).

The Net Asset Value of the Income Portfolio rose by 0.5% (also in total returns). A leading contributor was Princess Private Equity, which gained 4% following a decent asset value gain reported for February.

Key risks

Stock market movements may cause the value of investments and the income from them to fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Changes in rates of exchange may have an adverse effect on the value, price or income of investments. If markets fall, gearing can magnify the negative impact on performance.
